Couples growing their relationship while raising a child with special needs

It's not easy being a parent, and it's harder still to grow and maintain a healthy relationship with your significant other while parenting kids. Add a special needs child into the mix, and relationships can get into all sorts of challenges. Our presenters, Karen and Joe Hatch, will have a conversation about their experiences raising their child over the past fifteen years while also focusing on each other. They are genuine, down to earth, and have lived the same struggles many of us have. Please join us – with your significant other if possible – and enjoy their relaxed speaking style, while they tell us their story of love and parenting
